Funding Options for Supplements to the American Journal of Public Health

Journal Supplement:

AJPH defines a supplement issue as a full, separate volume of AJPH that is published in addition to the 12 regular issues of AJPH. Supplement issues can be anywhere from 20 pages to 120 pages and are fully open access and online-only. Limited edition print runs and full subscriber print runs can be added per the pricing options below. A proposal is required to evaluate projects for fit with AJPH objectives and priorities. To obtain the questionnaire rubric, contact Shokhari Tate, Journal Project Liaison, at the email address below.

Peer Review and Final Publication Decisions

All papers submitted for special issues undergo the regular AJPH submission and peer review process. APHA handles peer review of the article, and the Editor-in-Chief has the final say on which articles are accepted and published in the journal.

Contracts

AJPH can accommodate most contracting processes. Standard terms are 50% of funding due upon signing of Publishing Agreement, with the balance due upon acceptance of all papers. Payment scheduling is negotiable.

Timelines

The schedule will include approximately 2-3 months for recruitment (if issuing a Call for Papers or Abstracts), 4-6 months for the peer review and revision process, and approximately 2-3 months for copyediting, proofreading, and other production processes that follow final acceptance and precede online publication. All publishing schedules are worked out with the Editor-in-Chief, in coordination with the AJPH Production Team. Once set, all deadlines are final and cannot be moved.
